If this is a formal sentence, does "How is it?" mean "How is it?" or "What is it?" I don't think it means "What is it?" because of "How is it?". I'm having a hard time understanding these words. A: In this particular situation, "How is it?" is used to ask a specific question, and it's unlikely to have a meaning other than "What is it?" In contrast, when asking a general question, for example, "What is a present?" "How is it?" is a good choice. Distribution of substance P and calcitonin gene-related peptide in the rat spinal cord. The distribution of substance P (SP) and calcitonin gene-related peptide (CGRP) in the rat spinal cord was studied by light and electron microscopic radioimmunocytochemistry, using a series of specific monoclonal antibodies. The two peptides had different distributions. CGRP immunoreactivity (ir) was observed in small primary afferent terminals of the dorsal root ganglion and in large terminals of the intermediolateral cell column, whereas SP immunoreactivity was present in the cell bodies and processes of a subpopulation of dorsal horn neurons, and in the terminals of the dorsal root ganglion and the spinal nucleus of the trigeminal nerve. Only a few SP immunoreactive terminals were seen in the ventral horn and no CGRP immunoreactive terminals were seen in the ventral horn.Since the 1970s, an increasing number of women have experienced breast cancer, and in the United States, breast cancer is the most common cancer in women and the second leading cause of cancer-related death.
