See listing for Anyway, I was wondering if anybody could give me some tips as to how I would go about increasing the font size for the listings? Thanks! Okay, I was able to remove the original.JPG. Now I'm wondering, how do I upload the new.JPG? It keeps showing error messages saying that the file size is too large. Is there anything that I can do to fix the problem? Ok I just accidentally made the original.JPG too big and it won't let me upload it when I try. How would I go about 'filing' it. I tried 'View menu > Upload original >' but nothing is happening. I have an ebay listing for a fixit when I realized I'd like to make it bigger. can be dangerous. It happens when you double click on a window title bar that is too small or just smaller than the icons in the taskbar. The window then fails to increase its size. If that happens, press ALT + Spacebar, and hold the Shift key to maximize the window size in a snap. Is there any way to limit the size of a window? In a sense, the question is the same as asking about the ability to limit the window size in a maximum value. There is no easy answer for either of the questions, though. The Microsoft developers might add an option to the latest operating system. However, that is rather unlikely. One option that can be used is to limit a window's size based on its content. This can be achieved by the use of a proportional-scaling mode. It can be activated by using the Auto-Size feature of Windows. You will have to do some adjusting in your Windows registry for this purpose. To be able to resize a window proportionally, you will have to change the size of the resource section of your Windows registry. First, find the HKEY_CLASSES_ROOT\ShellEx\szWindowMinXXX Registry Key. As the name implies, this is a key for specifying the minimum window size when you double-click on a window's title bar. It can be changed by its value, or you can create a new value. Each time you change this value, close the Registry Editor. Open it again to make the changes effective. If the value is already there, you can leave it alone. Otherwise, right-click on the missing value, choose New, and then select Decimal as the Data type. You should now see the contents of your Registry Editor display in a box to the left. Double-click on the ShellEx Entry name in the left column. This should open the right column, displaying a long list of window sizes. Navigate to the windowMinXXX Value name in the right column, and modify its value. This is the minimum window size you want for proportional scaling. When you save the registry entry, the size of the Window
