Hot Topics: As rain provides respite, drought-weary cities press ahead By AGENCE FRANCE PRESSE, Los Angeles and Globe Gazette02/12/2014 Los Angeles is looking to remove the last of its 100,000 trees as record-setting rain fell across California over the weekend, but the city, which is facing a drought that is turning it brown, remains in a tense stance as it races to replant them. "People have seen beautiful rainbows and my heart has been so much lighter," Los Angeles Mayor Eric Garcetti said of the downpours, which have hit California's parched Central Valley hard. "The fourth of July is a birthday party for us and it's a day for the family. It's a beginning of this new drought and it has stopped raining, but we are not out of the woods yet, we are only out of the fourth of July for now." The weekend's deluge was the largest in the history of California, which has been hit by an unusually long period of drought over the past four years, according to the U.S. Drought Monitor. There has been an average of 4.5 inches of rain since November as Los Angeles has received an average of 14.81 inches of rain between January and March, records show. But as much as 80 percent of
