Internet Broadcasting Studio: Internet Broadcasting Studio is a free software package for streaming digital images and sounds into a web page. By using a web page (not a "live streaming" live site), Internet Broadcasting Studio is able to be used on all computers and browsers (including hand-held devices) running Windows 2000 or higher. Streams are compressed as they are transmitted, so bandwidth requirements are relatively modest. This software can be used to broadcast multimedia files such as: songs from your PC, slide shows, digital videos, and many other files. Since no bandwidth is required for this software, it can be used with a dial-up connection from a place with only a modem. Internet Broadcasting Studio allows you to stream images directly into the browser from your local drive or share files stored on a web site. BS-Server; BS-Player; Online Help; Starting and stopping the server; Booking a room or computer; Customizing the streams; Using the schedule list; Using the available rooms or computers; Connecting streams. Your first step in broadcasting is to install Internet Broadcasting Studio onto your PC. The only prerequisite is that your PC has a sound card to play the audio, and a web server (Apache, IIS, LAMP, etc) and FTP server to send streams to the web. The software is distributed as a 5 MB EXE file. After installing the program, you can see the main window in the image below. Once the software is installed, click on the "Start" button. When the server is running, click on the "Stop" button. The button "Booking a room or computer" will prompt for your computer or room to broadcast from. If you have more than one computer, be sure to add "PC01", "PC02", etc to the end of the name

What's New In Internet Broadcasting Studio?

BS-Server software is able to create a continuous data stream of images and audio from a PC. Using this software, you can show your pictures and music to a potentially large audience, broadcasting your playlists and pictures/music files to some web server. You can create a paid-view broadcast by using the BS-Server to encrypt your files, and you can have a subscription center where you can sell your "customized" broadcasts. The BS-Player is a light-weight multimedia player specially designed to receive the BS-Server data streams. BS-Player is freely redistributable, meaning that your audience can download it and use it for free. To protect your copyright, BS-Player does not have a "Save" feature and cannot save your data stream, but it can play all your files! There are several ways to use BS-Player: ◆ On Windows: to install BS-Player, you will first need the following files. Extract them from the "Linux" archive. ◆ Unzip the archive, and extract all the files under "BS-Server". Create a directory called "BS-Player" (under the dir of BS-Server), and put all the files under it. ◆ Create a text file and save it as "config.cfg". Edit it as follows. ◆ BS-Player configuration: ◆ url ◆ url ◆
