Q: NumberFormatException on stacktrace
I'm logging with slf4j and log4j, so i'm getting tons of stacktraces like the one above. Is there a way to format the stacktrace more useful? More specific: what's "PROD00: [...],08:40:54" means? is this any usefull? Any ideas on where to start searching this issue? Tks
A: It's usually most useful when there are more than one exception in the stacktrace (examples I find are checking an invalid date, like here, or bad inputs like here)

Simultaneous quantification of paracetamol, metoprolol and their deacetylated metabolite in human plasma by capillary electrophoresis-electrospray tandem mass spectrometry. Paracetamol is a widely used anti-inflammatory and antipyretic drug that is metabolised to form acetaminophen and the glucuronide conjugate (paracetamol glucuronide or NAPG). Paracetamol glucuronide conjugates are also known to form a metabolite which can be deacetylated to an acetamide metabolite. This deacetylated metabolite has been shown to possess higher anti-inflammatory activity compared to paracetamol. The assay described in this paper involves separation and quantification of paracetamol, paracetamol glucuronide and NAPG using capillary zone electrophoresis with online liquid chromatography-tandem mass spectrometry detection. This assay offers the necessary selectivity and sensitivity to simultaneously determine these compounds in human plasma and may be applied to pharmacokinetic and pharmacodynamic studies involving paracetamol or paracetamol glucuronide conjugates. // Copyright 2013 the V8 project authors.
