Version 1.0.0.0 – 2013-06-26 Initial release Keywords:imgur, upload, info@freelike.com Can N -ary semigroups be amalgamated into an N -ary group? Is it true that for every $N \in \mathbb{N}$ and every N -ary semigroup (A, \cdot) there exists an N -ary group (B, \ast) such that (A, \cdot) can be embedded into (B, \ast) ? This is the statement I want to prove. I found several articles that talk about the converse: When we can embed a semigroup into a group, we also get a semigroup. But I could not find any that covers a proof of this statement. A: Yes, this is true. A proof can be found in N.R. Reilly's Embedding of semigroups into semigroups (Theorem 3.1). In the specific situation of the question, with $N=2$, the key is to pick a group of order 2^k , the subgroup generated by a , and a monoid of order 2^k which is a direct sum of copies of the monoid of order 2: for example, a^k , or even just $\{a\}$. Edit: In case this helps: it is really the same proof as that in the case $N=2$. In general, if $N=2$ and $A=$
