A set of TTF characters that will allow you to change the normal appearance of your written documents. The way I approach font creation is quite simple: 1. I open my documents in whichever program I use (Google Docs, OpenOffice, etc.) 2. I highlight the text that I want to change and press 'Insert' on the keyboard 3. The characters that I want to replace my highlighted text are brought up and I choose one. I can just go straight to the keyboard and paste it, or click on the font name on the list and then go to the keyboard 4. All that I typed into the document will be changed. Now I have the ability to read normally and also see the text of the other designs. And since all that is possible from within the program that I'm using, I can simply copy and paste the text to Word or other programs so that all I have to do is change the font of the copied text instead of the entire document. Portonaccio is the classic Roman font, used in a lot of vintage movies, of written documents and advertising. The result is a kind of a classic British or American newspaper/magazine font, which has been revived and improved into a friendly readability font. To enjoy the 12 styles of Font Portonaccio, all that you have to do is install each font (using the installer, or by dragging it into the Fonts folder) and then change your appearance of your documents. The new styles of the Portonaccio Font Pack include: Portonaccio Jr. The Portonaccio Font Pack also includes for free another vintage font called Portonaccio Jr. This font is basically the 'cutting edge' version of the original font, which also comes with a free installer (which you can get from the Fonts download on the right side of this page). Portonaccio Jr. is intended to be a lighter font than the original, so it has a lower weight and narrower corner rounding. It still has the same figure and the same artistic style as the original Portonaccio, but has a slightly more modern look. To try it out, install Portonaccio Jr. from the Fonts folder, and you will be able to appreciate the difference. Portonaccio Jr. Description: ------------------------ New!
